In addition to meat, the Israelites also ate dairy products. Milk, cheese, and yogurt were all common foods. Honey was also a popular sweetener.

Clothing

The Israelites used the skins and wool of animals to make clothing. Leather was used for shoes, sandals, and belts. Wool was used for clothing, blankets, and rugs.

The Israelites also used the feathers of birds to make clothing. Ostrich feathers were particularly popular, and they were used to decorate headdresses and other garments.

Transportation

The Israelites used donkeys, horses, and camels for transportation. Donkeys were the most common type of animal used for transportation, and they were used to carry both people and goods. Horses were used for riding and for pulling chariots. Camels were used for transporting goods over long distances.

Warfare

The Israelites used animals in warfare. Horses were used to pull chariots, and donkeys were used to carry supplies. Dogs were used to guard camps and to track down enemies.

Other Uses

In addition to the uses listed above, animals were also used for a variety of other purposes in ancient Israel. For example, oxen were used to plow fields, and sheep were used to provide wool for making clothing.

Animals were also used for religious purposes. The Israelites sacrificed animals to God, and they also used animals in temple ceremonies.
